Introduction

This report provides an overview of your results after completing the Verbal Reasoning test. The test measures your reasoning skills when dealing with written novel information. An overview of what the test measures, your result and what this means, is provided below.

The Verbal Reasoning test assesses how quickly and accurately you can process novel verbal and written information and use it to draw the correct conclusions. This type of reasoning ability is involved in tasks that require making sense of large amounts of written information, such as interpreting written reports or documents. Your result is based on the number of questions you answered correctly and how quickly you provided the correct answer. Your result is then compared to others who have previously completed the assessment.

Verbal Reasoning

Taking into account the number of questions answered correctly, and the time taken for each correct answer, you scored below average on this reasoning test. A below average verbal reasoning score may indicate you find it more challenging working in roles that place a strong emphasis on working with large amounts of written information.

You may wish to consider allowing yourself more time when you know you will be facing activities that involve reading, interpreting and using substantial amounts of text. You may consider reading books or articles on the internet that are outside your current reading interests, to widen your vocabulary and to develop your confidence in working with written materials beyond your natural comfort zone.
